

SERVING AMERICANS

David believes the role of government agencies is to serve the interest of every American, not what is best for bureaucrats in Washington.

Government can only be accountable when it's Members of Congress are transparent and accessible to the voters. David makes a point to be in the community he calls home, meeting with people as often as possible, not in Washington D.C. with lobbyists and insiders.

Today, David and his family live on their dairy farm in Hanford where they are raising their three children. David believes that Members of Congress need know the people they serve in order represent them well.
